Despite Lack of Early Outdoor Practise Coach Robbins Expects Squad to Make Good Showing

ITHACA, N. Y .- The Cornell varsity lacrosse team composed of 14 players and Manager Leopold Tschirky is now on its annual Southern trip and despite the fact that the candidates have been handicapped on account of conditions contdoors, the team expects to make a "good showing in the games to be played.

During the trip some of the strongest. ombinations in the Southern states will played including Swarthmore, Johns Hopkins and Carlisle. With six of last year's squad back the prospects of a successful trip look bright. The veterans, Dean at first attack, Gridley at center, Keer at outside home, Niekerson at third attack, Franklin at first defense and Captain Bond at point, impart an invaluable steadiness to the play. The lack of field work, however, prevents an accurate forecast as to the strength of the team and for this reason Coach Robbins has not been given to expressing opinions regarding the outcome of the trip. No definite criterion can be obtained concerning the strength of the teams to ship of the Southern Intercollegiate Jeagne, is not up to its last year's standard. Four of its strongest men last year's team. The remainder of the only a single bout. James was defeated in a tie, the combination has been flecidedly weakened by the absence of the veterans. Carlisle and Swarthmore have not engaged in any major games sented in the list of candidates. W. E.

It Tells of the Greatest Sale of Groceries Ever Held in Boston

Largest and Finest Restaurant in New England.

Popular Prices.

Music 12 to 2.

To be held throughout all of next week in Boston's Model Pure Food Store—a Grocery Store sixty-one feet above the level of the street, where there is a natural cleanliness and purity of atmosphere conducive to the very best conditions for the display and sale of foods.

RECENTLY MADE ARRANGEMENTS WITH THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR to use twice as much space during the present year as was used by Henry Siegel Co. during the past year. We have been asked many times why we did not advertise groceries in the Monitor. These requests

We have noticed that nearly every line of wearing apparel and home furnishings is extensively advertised in the Monitor by other stores, while there has been comparatively little grocery advertising. We have made up our minds that when we advertise other lines of merchandise it is but natural that we share the business with other stores advertising the same lines. Therefore, why should we not be entitled to far better results from advertising groceries? So we have determined on a fair trial of grocery advertising. This is our first big grocery sale to be advertised in the Monitor. The future advertising of our grocery in the Monitor depends largely on the results to be obtained next week from this announcement. Consequently this is an opportunity for readers of the Monitor to rally to the support of their paper and at the same time become acquainted with the reliable quality, excellent service and lower prices available to patrons of our Pure Food Store.

We are satisfied that we can please you better than any other grocery. Hundreds of readers of the Monitor are already regular customers of our grocery department. They must be satisfied or they would not continue to give us their patronage month after month and year after year. Their satisfaction will be your satisfaction if you will give us your order next week and become a patron of our Model Food Store.

included the Leonora overture No. 3 in his program. Of this work he made a strikingly successful interpretation. It a unit of tone mass. It is nearer the modern symphonic band than the orhestra of the other numbers of the program. It is emancipated from the string quartet, whereas the orchestra of the Beetnoven passages in which Mr. Fiedler showed his second best is not. And its expression is free from the idiom of the Beethoven pianoforte. This short work is orchestral beyond its day.

The overture form taught the composer how to shake himself clear of the manner of thinking that his writing of piano sonatas developed in him. Mr. Fiedler is evidently enough trying to do what every interpreter should do who wants to add to the musical conquests of his time. He wishes to read his Beethoven in a way that will tell something new to the present day listener. He refuses to say over again what past interpreters have said, though this would be his easy road to applause. A failure of his kind with the Seventh symphony is better than a victory which added nothing to our knowledge of the great symphonist of a century ago.

Also I found that the short story wasn't my metier. I did better with the longer stuff. In the ensuing six months I planned and wrote four novels for the Munseys Magazine. ### BULKHEADS TO SAVE GRAVITY SYSTEM PIPE WHEN WATER ENTERS

TACOMA, Wash. One of the features of the completion of the Green river gravity system will be the filling of the long pipe with water. While people would naturally think that the only thing necessary to do would be to turn the water into the pipe and let it run to the other end, Engineer J. C. Manley points out that such a proceeding would mean the hammering apart and destruction of the pipe with the force of a great water hammer, as all the power of the miles of water running into the lower parts of the pipe would so slowly that it practically never would

RED IS POPULAR

Red as a trimming and as the chief coloring of frock and hat is making great efforts to achieve success. Hats and swathed waist belts, collars and cuffs, and even entire costumes, are shown in a very delightful shade of light red, in which there is more than a suspicion of rose lurking, says the Indianapolis News. It is an extremely adaptable red, as its conjunction with a mauve and white foulard frock recently proved. A mauve straw hat was designed for wear with this frock and this was also trimmed with a huge red

STRIPED LINEN

Striped linen is much in demand for coat and skirt costumes of the strictly tailored variety and the shops are showing quantities of this material in new weaves, says the New York Herald. The linen crashes in natural linen color with small white lines, almost indistinguishable at a distance, are most attractive and make extremely smart suits. The yard wide crashes are 50 cents, and those 45 inches wide 85 cents. Very good qualities of linen may be had for 28 cents a yard and the striped linens and other fancy weaves for 48 cents.

NEW VEIL DESIGNS

Black and white meshes are almost universally becoming, and for this reason a new assortment of veil designs always includes some in the magpie combinations, says the Indianapolis News. WASHINGTON—The area appraised as coal land by the United States geo-logical survey during the fiscal year 1911 as coal land by the United States geo logical survey during the fiscal year 1911 was 7.821,508 acres. The area classified as noncoal land was 2.386,444 acres greater than that so classified in 1910. On the other hand, the average price fixed per acre and the total appraised value are notably less for 1911 than 3

The difference is due to a concentraion of work in the lignite and low-grade subbituminous fields of eastern Montana and Wyoming, where the appraised values under the regulations are the minimum fixed by law.

The charge has been made that the classification policy of the geological survey has been harmful to the coal industry of the West by placing prohibitive prices on the public coal lands. The fact that the coal production of the Rocky mountain states in 1910 showed an increase of 14.7 per cent over the production of 1909 indicates that the western coal industry has not been seriously injured. vey has been harmful to the coal inusly injured.

AT MUSEUM OF ARTS

"Jade is estcemed by the Chinese above jewels and gold. They regard it as the first of precious stones," said Frank C. Macomber, honorary curator of western art, in a talk at the Museum of Fine Arts.

"Jade is usually either nephrite or jadeite, to use the mineralogical terms. Nephrite comes from Turkestan and is usually black with various shadings of green, according to the amount of iron present. Jadeite is found in Burmah, and is often white, rose, pale green, emerald green or apple green. The green is caused by the presence of varying amounts of chromium.

"Jade is found for the most part on the tops of high, barren mountains, and is mined by a primitive method. A fire is built during the day. At night the rock cools quickly and fractures in all directions, permitting the masses of jade to be broken up. Jade thus obtained does not prove of such high average quality as the pebbles found in the water courses of mountains, or the boulders brought down from the heights by glaciers.

"Jade is often referred to in the an eient Chinese books, as far back as the Chou dynasty, 1122-225 B. C. There are references to the keeper of the Emperor's jade magazine, and descriptions of the jade tablets that symbolized various

MISS BILLIE BURKE. 'JIMMY VALENTINE' AND "SUMURUN

Miss Billie Burke has another congenial role in "The Runaway," a new comedy from the French, in which she comes to the Hollis street theater on Monday evening. Her role is that of a charming, wilful girl who has been brought up by two maiden aunts in rural seclusion. A Parisian painter passes that way and tarries long enough to arouse romance and ambition in the girl. She goes to his studio and declares that she will stay to learn to paint. A pretty, humorous romance springs up between them. C. Aubrey Smith plays the artist. Others in the cast me George Howell, Edwin Nicander, Morton Selten, Jane Evans, Josephine Morse, Alice Gale.

At the graduating exercises of the caior class of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, New York, George Arliss, me of the most distinguished actors of the English speaking stage, delivered the address to the graduates. He said:

"The first thing I advise you to do, now that you have finished your academic training, is to get into a stock company's you have been here in New York; you have had opportunities of seeing and studying the best actresses and actors this country holds. Keep' them in your mind and go and do likewise; go and act before an audience; never mind where or what, so long as you keep on playing different parts, and never lower your standard. If all the actors around you are bad, stagy actors, never mind, you can't help that: keep in your mind always the methods of those actors whom you wish to emulate. ### LECTURE SERIES IS BEGUN AT AMHERST

Prof. Brander Mathews, the noted essayist and critic, delivered the first of the Clyde Fitch lectures at Amherst Collage in college hall recently. The series of lectures on American drama is being given in connection with the Clyde Fitch fund of $20,000, established at Amherst last June by the parents of the famous playwright on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his graduation from the college. Professor Mathews was introduced by rresident Harris, and spoke in part as "It was with very great pleasure that I accepted the invitation to speak in connection with the Clyde Fitch memorial fund. I knew Clyde Fitch when he was unknown and followed his career with sympathy and great appreciation. I hope in my third lecture to deal with his work and to give him the consideration that he deserves. Today I shall begin by considering American drama as a whole with respect to origin and beginnings and the conditions under which it came into existence. I wish to discuss first the difference between American and English literature which at the same time is unfortunate, but necessary,

"Necessary because American literature must stand by itself, and unfortunate because it is a part of English literature and cannot be set off without this understanding of the relation. English iterature includes all works in the English language which attain the level of literature. It is a question of language, not of nationality. English literature is our heritage; it is ours by right of descent. The duty of preserving the Anglo-Saxon literature is mostly ours, because the greater part of that stock is now on this side of the water.

HEAD MASTERS ASSOCIATION AND ITS PLACE AMONG BOSTON ORGANIZATIONS

Preserves Unity of Aim and Work That Has Stirred Comment by Educators From Other Big Cities

Many persons, doubtless, are not aware that the 30 or more organizations of Boston teachers for social, intellectual and financial. welfare figure largely in maintaining the present high standard of school efficiency. Some are unofficial and voluntary and others are under the direction of the superintendent of schools, with schom the members are expected to work in unison, being called upon to serve with committee or take up other special activities. and to make recommendations in connection with studies. In fact. Boston teachers do much toward grranging the class room work and courses of study in the system. A series of articles dealing with these teachers organizations has been prepared for the Monitor, the second appearing today.

IDELY differing as are the 15 high schools and one normal school which Boston possesses, there is observable among them a certain unity of aim and work that soms remarkable to persons from other cities where like problems of general, industrial and cultural education following grammar school instruction have come up to be worked

This unity is preserved through an organization of high school principals or head masters known as the Boston Head Masters Association and eight high school councils composed of heads of departments in the various schools.

To distinguish them from the masters or principals of elementary schools, principals of high schools are called head. masters. The term master, in addition to being used to designate principals of elementary schools, is conferred upon heads of departments in high schools, such as the master of mathematics, the master of Latin, Greek, English, history, machine-shop work, forging, business technique or commercial branches.

The Boston Head Masters Association is limited in membership to the principals of high and normal schools. That Explain the News

What Makes a Newspaper a Public Institution?

HAT question is answered in the one word SERVICE. But what is service? Service by a newspaper lies in its standing for and supporting those measures and policies which mean most for the public welfare; magnifying the good—telling of what is being done to upbuild in the world's work; protecting the buying public from unscrupulous advertisers; elaborating upon subjects which are not only entertaining but educational. It is obvious that service of this character is universal in its application and bound to be of individual and collective good. The integrity of American institutions can have no stronger champion and support than those representatives of the press which are governed by a sense of their responsibility to the ideals of our democracy; and our democracy was founded to guarantee the greatest good to the greatest number. The modern trend in the publishing world is toward newspapers which measure up to this standard of excellence and service, and in this movement there are a few examples which are expressing the broader view of journalism which is widely in newspaper ideals is governed by a fixed purpose to fulfil its true mission as a public institution, as much as it is trying to be a daily newspaper of world-wide interest, and while it is giving due consideration to American interests and institutions, it is reaching out to fill more thoroughly its place as a world newspaper.

Its High Ideals and Far-Reaching Service

have established The Monitor in the journalistic field, and each day sees this newspaper progressing and becoming a greater power for good in all the ways that a newspaper ought to serve. And its potential service is a feature which is gratifying to those who are looking toward bigger and better things for all mankind.

There is no such thing among civilized nations as absolute free trade. Savages have it, but they have no government expenses to meet. There are free ports, to be sure. ### A Brilliant Showing of New Hats

Spring Millinery Styles are fixed-have been fixed for some time-Paris has accepted various modifications of hats of early periods-principally Francis I., Louis XVI. and the Directoire.

In order that their millinery may not become too fixed and common, and in order to show each day something new and of interest, Chandler & Co.'s makers and designers are continually working out new variations of these imported models--it may be a slight change in the placing of a plume, or a variation in the shape, or an added touch of color, or a delightful new combination of tintings.

So great is their ability to originate and modify that their interpretations of Paris styles offer practically unlimited choice—and this is done at a saving of half or more on the prices of the imported models.

For Next Week - The Showing of New Hats Will Include

All Silk Crepe De Chine Night Gowns

The probabilities are that few people have ever associated the idea of silk with night gowns and if they have it has always been associated with a garment that was very elaborate and the price necessarily very high. This is the fact.

There have been crepe de chine night gowns sold in the past, usually at 7.00, 10.00, 15.00 and 20,00. They have been bought perhaps for part of a bridal outfit—but commercially they have hardly been thought of until recently. However, they have become quite the mode in Paris, and there has been a wonderful sale of them in New York.

Chandler & Co. were the first to show them at anything but the high prices in Boston-their initial order, which was a large one, was entirely sold in one day—an additional order was placed for night gowns of a beautiful quality of silk crepe de chine, trimmed with dainty laces and ribbons, 3.75 cut on most graceful and liberal lines, and they would be fairly valued at 5.00 to 6.00. Price...

Figure This Out Yourself-There are about 3 1-2 yards of silk crepe de chine, value 1.25 a yard, making 4.38, and the trimmings and making with manufacturers' profits would easily bring the amount up 1.50 or 1.75, making the total

Other Crepe de Chine Garments-Night Gorens, from 5.00 to 15.00. Combinations, from 3.75 to 8.00. Kimonos, from 7.95 to 22.50.

French Lingerie Night Gowns

Hand Made Night Gowns of the finest French nainsook-it is a well known fact that the French people are loyal to fine designs and fine patterns, and they will insist on the same identical style of garments and embroideries year after year-this has resulted in some styles of great purity of designs and fineness of equality being produced at prices that seem almost incredible.

This particular night gown if it were just brought out and the price had not been established by the French women themselves would easily sell for 5.00 or 5.50-a year ago the embroidery was only worked on the bodice of the hand scalloped square neck.

The manufacturer, on account of large orders, was persuaded to seallop the short kimono sleeves and finish them with a beautiful design of embroidery to match the front-which is a free-hand design of carnation. Price .....

Other Night Gozens showing like values at 5.00 to 10.00.

French Hand Emb. Chemises

Unbaundered-This is the second order on these chemises-altogether this year there have been over 1000 of this one style im ported-it is a very graceful design, and the quality is exceedingly fine—the needlewok is exceptional and shows, in addition to the usual needlework, the fine seed embroidery,

These only came through the custom house last week. The previous shipment was all sold out in two hours, and why? They are worth 1.75, and it was only by placing orders for these ormous quantities that a price was gotten which enables Probably the greatest value in French chemises of fine quality ever offered to Chandler & Co.'s knowledge.

French Skeleton Skirts

Hand Made and Hand Embroidered

These Skeleton Skirts are exceedingly fine and very well adapted to the prevailing style of dress-the quality is medium sheer nainsook and especially adapted for wear beneath slips and heavy enough to wear under white dresses. A fair value would be 2.50, but on account of concentration of purchases they will be sold at 1.65

CITY OF NASHVILLE IS READY FOR SOUTHERN COMMERCIAL CONGRESS

Second in Series of Five Meetings to Emphasize Advancement of South to Be Held There Next Week

PLANS SET FORTH

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Preparations are virtually complete for the fourth annual convention of the southern commercial congress, which will open next Monday in this city and which is to be the second of a series of five big meetings emphasizing the advance of the South in the last two score years or more. People from outside already are arriving in anticipation of the event and many more are expected to reach here in the few day remaining prior to the convention.

The first of these meetings was held last year in Atlanta, to show the South's physical growth; the second, next week, will deal with the South's agricultural and educational development and related subjects. In 1913, at some southern port, the congress plans to commemorate the South's commercial growth; in 1914, in Oklahoma, the South's internal develop ment will be commemorated, and in 1915, probably at Washington, there will be set forth the accomplishments of half a century. The purpose of these gatherpresident of the congress, is the glorification of the South, the inspiration of her men and the enlightenment of the na-Fletcher brought out the fact that the Frankfort. that the congress is, therefore, devoting vited), in connection with the South's growth and prosperity.

MONITOR BOOK OF GAMES

BUNT is a simple but lively little game that may be played by either boys or girls, Any number over four can play. The only equipment required is a stout six-inch bean-bag.

The players choose one of their number for umpire, and then divide into two equal parties. The umpire announces the time to be allowed for the game, usually about 20 minutes, and then crying, "Ready, sides!" throws the bag high into the air.

Whoever catches the bag when it comes down wins the first point for his side. He must immediately throw it to another on his side, trying to prevent its falling into the hands of an opponent. After this it is kept going rapidly, each player trying to keep or win it for his own side.

After the bag is "in play" points may be scored in two ways, either by getting the bag away fro your opponents, or by fouls made by them. These things count as fouls, each counts one point for the innocent side: Holding the bag, dropping the bag, or letting it fall to the ground, touching the bag while it is in another player's hand, throwing to a player who is within

When the bag is dropped or falls to the ground it is out of play, and only the umpire may pick it up and throw it again, straight into the air, as at the beginning of the game. The players on one side should tie handkerchiefs about their wrists or use some other distinguishing mark, to help the umpire in keeping track of the score.-Youths Companion.

The Monitor prints one or two games each week. Cut out and paste in blank book and you will have a good collection.

Household effects, including books, pictures, furniture, tableware, table linen, bed linen, and other similar articles, unless used abroad by the owner for a period of a year or more. Goods in the piece. Articles of any nature intended for sale, or for other persons.

Is Not Too Much to receive on money in-Homes in Los Angeles

The New England Investor cannot personally pass on these securities, nor always find mortgages for the amount he has to invest. The enormous demand for nomes in Los Angeles (a city which from 1900 to 1910 increased 211%, is a city mow of 350,000, and expects to have 'a million in 1920), abserbs a large amount of capital at a relatively high interest rate. To secure this capital and build these homes the HOME BUILDERS' was organized. We build homes for people of good credit who pay on installments. We have resources of 41,277,235,99 and pay quarterly dividends at the gate of 8% per annum on common. The money invested in stack is used in building lapmes, and the security back of the stock is in the form of mortgages on the real estate and improvements. We seek new capital in sums of $100 upwards, and are selling preferred to yield 6.36% and common to yield 6.06%. Investigation of all details invited. Bauk and meccantile agency references. It has become increasingly obvious that for plants to retain their territorial or trade positions it is necessary to utilize every operating economy possible by improved and additional plant equpment; and in order to keep this equipment in the best of condition the company's working capital has been stretched to the utmost. The Business Situation

Among various factors which contribute to the return of confidence noted in business lines is a more constructive trend of thought, entertained generally. Following a prolonged period of depression and uncertainty, due largely to investigations and prosecutions on the part of the government, there seems to be a more universal desire on the part of the public to encourage business and industrial institutions. Corporations and the public are coming to realize that their interests are mutual, that it is wise to live and let live. Prosecution of the corporations under the Sherman anti-trust law and the benefits obtained may be open to discussion, but without going into this phase of the matter we may say that corporations have less to fear than formerly from threatened dissolution. And yet the question of the trusts and their regulation is far from solution.

There has been a consistent forward movement in business thus far this year. The past week has experienced further expansion particularly in the textile and iron and steel industries. It has been some years since stocks of merchandise have been so low. The result is that with a further revival of business this spring there has been active buying in various lines of trade. Railroad company reports show larger gross earnings for the past month, indicating the heavier traffic resultant from merchandise distribution on a larger scale. A still more satisfactory index of business growth is the increased bank clearances throughout most of the United States. These unmistakable signs of prosperity are most encouraging.

Further and more permanent improvement would be enjoyed if the spirit of toleration and good will between capital and labor could be more generally entertained. Strikes in America and Europe are the greatest menace to commerce. The suffering and devastation they cause is experienced not only by the workers and their employers, but directly or indirectly by every individual in the world. Consequently there should be a universal effort put forth in the direction of perpetual industrial peace. Wariare between nations is most to be deplored, but strikes are much more costly to the world's commerce and industry. Hope is entertained that the present miners' difficulties in America and Europe are near an end. Certain it seems that the worst is over, and it is this feeling that adds much to prospects for further industrial expansion for the remainder

SAN FRANCISCO is rapidly getting ready to spend $5,000,000 on a civic center. Of course, the hope is that the civic center will be -ready for the Panama-Pacific exposition season. This is the unpleasant feature of it. Cities should build for the future, not for a special occasion, and they should never spend $5,000,000 in a hurry.

Financial Freedom Farmer

DAVID LUBIN, American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, has returned to the United States in response to an invitation of the southern commercial congress, which assembles Monday in Nashville, Jenn., that he deliver an address on "Cooperative Banking for Farmers." This is a subject to which Mr. Lubin has devoted much time and thought and one on which he is now a recognized authority. It is somewhat strange, but nevertheless true, that it is a subject with which a large part of continental Europe has been familiar for more than a century. The field has been wide open to investigation for generations, and yet the system of financial relief for farmers which Mr. Lubin will advocate at Nashville in a few days will seem like something entirely new to the majority of Americans. This, perhaps, is due principally to the fact that only recently have conditions in the United States ripened to the point where thought is receptive of the idea. At all events, it is intimated that the United States government sees such possibilities in the plan of operation which Mr. Lubin has evolved from his observations of the rural cooperative banking system abroad that, in a sense, it is furthering his propaganda in

In Mr. Lubin's opinion the introduction of the system into the United States will solve the trust problem. The most effective way of curbing what has come to be called "big business," as he sees it, is to deprive them of the monopoly of handling the products in which they deal, and this is, in effect, one of the things which, in his judgment, will result from the syndicating of the securities of the

Under the system prevailing in the United States, he explains, when a man with a commercial business wants money he goes to a bank, and upon a statement of his business and his rating, which is published, he obtains credit and money upon his signature.

The farmer, however, has no rating, and when he asks for an accommodation he is told by the commercial banker to go to a savings bank and raise money upon a mortgage. In Germany, we are informed, a remedy of practically universal application was found for this long ago. At present, under the Raiffeison system, for instance, the owners of a tract of land organize and clearly define the boundaries. There may be 500 farm owners in the organization. As a body, compactly joined, they become of importance in the eyes of the financial world. They form a committee and turn their combined cooperative securities into one general security-into one negotiable bond-and with this they go to the banks and get money at from 3 to 41/2 per cent. The security as a whole is all the banker looks to. In possession of credit at the bank, a credit which enables him, as it does the merchant, to command the money necessary to the promotion and protection of his business, he need not be "squeezed" into parting with his produce at trust prices. He can control his goods and deal directly with the public, the consumer. He and not the trust will be the arbiter of the cost of living; he can afford to sell below trust prices, because he can save the trust profit; prices will go down and the trusts will

As Mr. Lubin frankly says, this seems too much like a dream to be true, and yet it is a dream that has been realized in other countries. Apparently, there is no reason why it should not come true in the United States. It is certainly worth experimenting with.

AT LAST there is seeming confirmation of the prevalent theory regarding the effect of the hobble skirt upon the textile industry. George W. Neville, president of the New York cotton exchange, in an address before the American Cotton Manufacturers Association at Washington, D. C., on Wednesday, asserted that the falling off in consumption by reason of the introduction of this style of apparel represented in amount twelve yards of cotton goods for every woman in the civilized world. It should be said that Mr. Neville very discreetly placed responsibility for this statement upon a mathematical friend. Of course, any loss or any gain, no matter how small, in individual consumption amounts to an immense sum in the aggregate, but there is always the necessity for taking into consideration the compensatory conditions. If every woman in the civilized world would use one hairpin less than she had been using on an average for a given number of years that would make a tremendous difference in the total consumption of hairpins. A yard of cloth saved by every woman would mean in the aggregate a decrease in consumption of hundreds of millions of yards.

But there are always the compensating gains for all losses of this kind. The hobble skirt has reduced the individual feminine consumption of textiles in some particulars; in other particulars it has probably increased it. Unless experience has been completely reversed in the past year, the outlay for dry goods in the average household has not been greatly reduced by reason of a change in the style. If less material has been necessary, all the probabilities point to the fact that better material has been purchased and that the supply of garments has been increased.

In order to come out safely in any discussion of this kind, it is best to follow Mr. Neville's plan and provide one's self with a mathematical friend upon whom all responsibility may be placed. The next best thing is simply to strive to reach a conclusion somehow that will be satisfactory to the interested parties. This may be' accomplished by saying that if the ladies have been happy in the hobble skirt, then any effect that garment may have had upon the world's industry, one way or another, is a matter of minor importance.

Tammany Hall and Mr. Clark

WE HAVE seen it reported that those who favor the nomination of Speaker Clark for the presidential office are working hard to that effect in New York. This is perfectly proper on the part of these gentlemen and we trust they may receive every attention to their views, but we also note that they are trying to impress Tammany Hall. It is possible that their efforts in this direction may be due to the fact that many of Mr.

Clark's supporters being citizens of commonwealths at some distance from New York, they have overlooked the fact that there is but one way of impressing Tammany Hall and that is a way that has never commended itself to the voters at large in the United States. We would add to that another fact, which we stated a long time ago in these columns, namely, that the friendship of Tammany Hall has never helped a candidate for the presidency. Doubtless it might do so within the strictly-limited area of New York city, but even there it could be predicted with a good deal of accuracy that if Tammany Hall was for a candidate it meant that so many voters would thereupon determine to vote against him. Outside New York city Tammany has had still less influence in New York state, while in the nation at large its championship of a candidate invariably supplies his opponent's supporters with arguments for gaining the enormous independent vote. Tammany Hall, while displaying within its own territory a marvelous strength of organization and an instinct for taking advantage of its opponent's mistakes, has never made its position or its influence national or anything like national, and Mr. Clark will have displayed an astonishing ignorance of national polities if he fails to grasp this fact. A most amiable and industrious man, his position is in no way so strong that he can afford to ignore the public's acquaintance with some of the conspicuous features in the history of Tammany Hall, features that no Fourth of July oratory can obscure, and such, moreover, at this hour of the country's need, as every patriotic man must reprobate and disayow. We venture to say that Mr. Clark may gain much more strength by a bold reliance on the people and as bold a denial of the friendship of Tammany Hall than be may by seeking aid that is never given for nothing and that, however useful it may be, carries with it too much need for apology that can never be made convincing. The history of politics in the United States has shown that when a question takes on proportions that include the nation, a local political machine, however strong and adroit in its home territory, shrinks curiously in importance and effectiveness as soon as it attempts to affect that question's decision.

HERE and there Justice Hughes is still mentioned as a "dark horse," but possibly not by those who entertain a real regard for

South

America and

the Beef

Supply

It is hardly to be expected that the verdict of the Chicago jury in the beef-packer cases will have any direct effect on the industry as it has developed in South America. As regards shipments of meats between the United States and the southern continent there are no interstate commerce questions involved, since very few shipments of this nature take place. But where American financial interests, and in some instances leading packing interests, are now said to control the cattle trade and the meat trade of both Argentina and Uruguay, it is not difficult to see that there is a connecting link between what takes place at Chicago and Kansas City, for instance, and what happens to the great industry near Buenos Aires and Montevideo. In Argentina, at any rate, the municipalities at the present time are making inquiries relative to fixing of prices and control of supply. London is a good customer for Argentine meats at the present time. Some years ago the United States supplied the European market. Now almost the entire foreign meat consumption in England depends on either South America or Australia. It was when the great pampas of Argentina and Uruguay began to show their capa-

It is not easy to determine to what extent the American beef packers are interested in the South American packing plants. Argentine and Uruguayan companies are organized under the laws of their bilities that the northern financiers at once sought out that field.

Tube Skirts and Cloth Consumption respective countries, and the names of the concerns give little information. But James D. Whelpley, the commercial agent of the United States, in 1910 informed his government that the American packers had transferred their base of supply for Europe from the Mississippi valley to the River Plate, and certainly he made this report only after a thorough investigation.

The Argentine minister of agriculture recently began an inquiry into the organization of the home packing plants. His findings have not yet been made public, but it has been stated that London is a complainant regarding the fluctuating prices which prevail for the Argentine products. And whatever may be the report of this official as to supply and cost. Argentine cattlemen admit that it was due to northern influence that they have managed to obtain better prices for their stock. It seems to be established that the packing companies themselves own vast tracts of land in Argentine for the raising of their own raw material. The Sansinena company, for instance, has a plant, "La Negra," near Buenos Aires, which covers more than 37,000 acres, and can accommodate at one time 5000 head of cattle and 20,000 sheep. And their holdings are increasing to an extent that portends that the packers may in time eliminate the middleman.

A PENETRATING observer and critic of a people's measure of civilization often takes as his test details of life that are unconventional. Thus a shrewd Scotchman visiting Boston did not appraise it so much by its schools, 'churches, women's clubs and its carefully preserved historical monuments as by the humane relations existing between Boston Common squirrels and pigeons and the Boston small boy. This, he said, implied a reverence for sub-human life that was proof of juvenile ethical development such as he had never seen in any European city. There is one aspect of American life which, while not much preached about or commented on, nevertheless needs to be faced and dealt with. It is the habit of defacing and mutilating buildings and monuments and appropriating souvenirs. Hotels and restaurants are victims to the extent of a replacement cost aggregating millions annually. When foreign ships or American naval vessels enter port and extend hospitality to "the people" they reckon on being plundered and on having ship property marred. And this by landsmen—and women with unimpeachable records of "respectability."

As for monuments and works of art set up in public places, the autographic record of the iconoclastic egoist is writ large over marble and bronze. Nor is this all. Anything portable and concealable, belonging to the monument or to the public building, is likely to be snatched away. The motive cannot be pecuniary, for the detached ornament seldom has intrinsic worth, nor can it safely be marketed as being what it is. The ravisher simply seems to lack conscience as to matters of beauty and civic honor, failing to appreciate the fact that if he mars public property and destroys the perfection of a work of art, he helps to create a reputation for vandalism for his countrymen. Truly home or school should do far more than is done now to impress upon youth of both sexes the public's sole right of property in historical and esthetic belongings.

All this is apropos the recent disclosures of vandalism in New York city, the mutilation of St. Gauden's statue of Farragut in Union square, and other evidence relative to ignorance of or contempt for both beauty and duty. That much can be done through education. to change the barbarian and Philistine point of view, has been shown during the past generation by an altered attitude of urban juveniles toward plants and trees growing in public parks. Something is vet needed to reach and to change those many worse offenders who are

Ix a western American city a few years ago public opinion united in behalf of a general community spring cleaning, and within even a few weeks some wonderful changes in community appearance were brought about. Front yards, back yards and side yards, more or less neglected for years, were cleaned, raked, spaded, sodded, planted. By the time the early summer was on, a perfect metamorphosis had taken place in what had been the most uninviting of the residence districts; by midsummer, fences, outhouses, barns and porches were covered with vines and creeping plants; the back lots that had been notable mostly for untidiness and litter were transformed into pleasant little gardens; spots that had been positive disfigurements had been made attractive to the eye. The rear ends of tenement houses concealed behind woodbine or morning glory, the unpainted gable behind a robe of wild cucumber, the yard corners that had held tin cans, bottles and miscellaneous rubbish hidden behind foliage plants, made up a new and delightful perspective and lent freshness and beauty to scenes that needed to be blotted out, not only from sight, but from recollection.

It costs little or nothing to do this. Everybody in the community felt glad that it had been done, hoped that it would be done annually. There was scarcely a neighborhood that was not permanently benefited by it. Enthusiasm is ephemeral, and after a few seasons there was a lessening of general interest in the work; but the influence of that first spring has been sufficient to prevent the districts once redeemed from going wholly back to the old ways of negligence and slovenliness, and this spring there are signs of another popular revival of the original movement.

The newspapers of other cities, in all parts of the country, are moved by this reawakening, or by the impulses that are common to all with the approach of the vernal season, to advocate similar undertakings at home. It is properly pointed out that the time, energy and money required to bring about a change that raises a neighborhood 1000 per cent in the esteem of people of even moderate taste are of too little consequence to be regarded as obstacles. The work of putting a yard in order, of sowing grass seed, of planting shrubs, vines or flowers, once entered upon, becomes a pleasure rather than a task. If engaged in by a whole neighborhood or a whole community, it gives to summer that touch of nature and of beauty yearned for by even the most callous of city dwellers. There is not merely an esthetic influence to be gained by cleaning and beautifying the shabby and bare places in population centers, there is a moral uplift as well. All the art in creation at a distance cannot compensate for the loss of any of those little adornments associated in the human mind with the name of home. For the sake of the young in particular the effort to bring into the sunlight the beauteous and bounteous gifts which nature is ready to bestow upon all should be determined and continuous.
